Education Philosophy Paper

In the beginning of my freshman year I wasn't sure why I wanted to be a teacher, all I knew was that I made my family proud. I entered with not have a single goal or purpose I had to becoming a teacher yet over the years I started to educate myself with the help of the teachers I had and the students. My junior year I have a goal that I want to accomplish once I graduate. My goal is to help my community, to help them achieve their goals and encouraging them to achieve them. I chose to get my endorsement in Bilingual because not many are actually trained in that profession. I want to help children find the joy in school and involve the art as much as I can when teaching. I want to help my community and help create bonds and lasting memories for generations to come.

Children always amazing me every time I see one. Every child is different, that means we shouldn't treat them as a whole when teaching but instead to see them as individuals. Every one of them have the ability to grow and conquer their fears and goals in life. As teachers we are here to help them grow from their early stages until they are finished with their education. I plan to never give up on a child no matter how difficult it is or how impatient it gets, every child is different and if they need help I plan to help them. In the classroom I believe that everything should be taught, math, arts, language, writing and even science. Expand on theses subjects while also helping them explore and grow as individuals. The classroom should be a safe place for them to express themselves and not feel afraid to be judged, display their works and also ask them what the classroom needs. Make the classroom feel like their second home, a place where they can grow with their developments socially, cognitively and emotionally. I want to involve art as much as I can in the classroom when teaching, creating lessons that involve math with art or science with art. I believe that the form of arts can help increase social and emotional developments while also helping with self esteem and achievements.

Parents and family should always be involved with the school. The connection with family in the school setting shows many benefits for the child's future. Not only does it help the child increase interest in school but it's also building this relationship with the family. Some times it may be difficult for them to get involved but as a teacher you should try whatever you can to get them involved. Everything starts with the teacher.
